CHAPTER I.
OF ORDINARY MEETINGS.

1. THE ordinary meetings of the Society shall commence the last Saturday but one of October, and be held every Saturday until twelve sets of members shall have read their dissertations. Each ordinary meeting for private business shall commence at six o'clock P. M. and shall not be protracted beyond seven. If the private business should not then be finished, it shall be resumed either at the next ordinary meeting, or at an extraordinary one to be appointed for that purpose †. An adjournment journeymen of a few minutes shall take place after the private business, when the public business shall commence, and continue, with an adjournment of a few minutes between the case and question, until the meeting be dissolved by the President.

2. The names of the ordinary attending members shall be called over by the Secretary, at the beginning and end of private business, at the beginning of public business, during the interval between the case and question, and at the end of public business. If any of the members be absent from either of the roll-calls, at private business, he shall be fined 6 d.; if from both 1 s.; if from one of the roll-calls (public business) 6 d. if from two 1 s. and if from the whole three 1 s. 6 d.

3. Any member may petition for leave of absence from the meetings of the Society for a limited time, provided he be not to give in dissertations within three weeks. This petition shall circulate a week, and then be determined by ballot, three-fourths of the Society being required for its admission; and if rejected, a second petition cannot be presented by the same member, during the same session, founded on similar reasons. During the permitted time of absence, the person who has obtained it shall enjoy none of the privileges of a member. And if, after the expiration of this term, he should be absent from three successive ordinary meetings, without a sufficient apology, he shall thereby incur the penalty of expulsion.

4. The Secretary shall, on every night of meeting, examine the list of absentees; and if any honorary or extraordinary member, whose name may be on the list of circulation, should have been absent three successive nights, without a sufficient excuse, he shall not be permitted mitted to receive the dissertations and minutes the remainder of that session: Nor shall he, in any future session, receive them, until he shall have petitioned the Society, and obtained permission.

5. No person shall publish, or intentionally furnish any other person with materials for publishing, any of the transactions of the Society without their authority. Any member infringing this law, incurs the penalty of expulsion.

C H A P. II.

OF EXTRAORDINARY MEETINGS.

1. WHEN one third of the Society may think an extraordinary meeting requisite, the President in office shall appoint it within forty-eight hours, unless the member proposing it consent to its being later.

2. The roll shall be called at the beginning and end of the meeting ; and if any member is absent at either roll-call, he shall be fined 1 s. and if from both 2 s. The following appeals to be considered valid ; confinement for one day by illness, engagements at other societies, at classes, absence from town two miles.

3. The first Wednesday after the last ordinary meeting of each session, there shall be an extraordinary meeting, for the purpose of collecting the money due to the Society.

4. The succeeding Saturday there shall be another extraordinary meeting, for the purpose of receiving the report of the committee, which shall have been appointed to examine the accounts of the Presidents.

C H A P.

C H A P. III.

OF THE DECISIONS OF THE SOCIETY.

1. WHEN any proposal shall be made to the Society, and seconded, if it be not unanimously agreed to, it shall be determined by ballot at the ensuing ordinary meeting, except a proposal for an extraordinary meeting, which shall be balloted for immediately. Any proposals made at an extraordinary meeting, and seconded, if not objected to by one in ten, shall be balloted for immediately; if otherwise, shall be determined at an extraordinary meeting, to be appointed that day se'ennight.

2. The manner of balloting shall be as follows : Every member who may not choose to vote, having retired, each remaining member shall receive a balloting ticket, which he shall put into the admit or reject side of the balloting box. The Secretary shall then count the number of voters ; and, if this be found by the President and four ordinary members summoned each night in rotation, according to their seniority, (who shall always together examine the returns), to correspond with the number of bal-

balloting tickets in the box, the President shall announce the decision of the question, according to the proportion of tickets in the different sides.

3. A proposal for adopting a new regulation * shall be admitted by the concurrent suffrages of two thirds of the Society. A petition for a seat in the Society shall be admitted upon the following conditions: When the number of members voting shall be below twenty-nine, if there be not four negatives; when the number voting shall be between twenty-eight and thirty-eight, if there be not five negatives; between thirty-eight and forty-eight, if there be not six, and so on in the same proportion. A proposal for the admission of an honorary member shall be admitted, if there be not one negative for every ten members voting. A proposal for the admission of a visitor shall be admitted, if there be not two negatives. A petition for a certificate shall be admitted, by a majority of the Society. A petition for leave to alter the turn of delivering dissertations shall be admitted, if there be not six negatives. A petition for altering the subjects of dissertations, or of new members for leave to write on particular subjects, shall be admitted by the suffrages of two-thirds of the Society.

3. The sense of the Society, collected from the suffrages of a majority by ballot, shall in all other cases regulate their decisions.

C H A P. IV.

OF ORDINARY MEMBERS.

1. EVERY petition for an ordinary seat, shall be presented in due time, at an ordinary meeting, by some one member, who shall not be at liberty to make a commendatory speech in favour of the candidate ; but a written recommendation shall be affixed to every such petition when it is presented, signed by no fewer than six, and not more than twelve members. The spirit of the following recommendation to be preserved. We the underwritten members of the Medical Society of Edinburgh, attest upon our honour, that we believe the petitioner is perfectly qualified to become an useful member to the Society.

2. No petition shall be balloted for more than once the same evening, unless on the discovery of a mistake in the ballot.

3. No petition shall be received from the same candidate more than for three times the same session.

4. Admissions into the Society shall take place between the 1st of November and 1st of May.

5. If

5. If any member ask or promise his vote for or against a candidate, he shall incur the penalty of 10 s. 6 d.

6. A copy of the Laws shall be sent to each new elected member, by the person who shall have presented his petition. The new elected member may sign the Laws (at the appointed time *) any of the three nights of ordinary meeting succeeding his election : But, if he neglect to sign them the first night, he shall incur the penalty of a crown. If he continue his neglect the second night, he shall incur the penalty of another crown. And, if he continue his neglect the third night, he shall forfeit the right of ever becoming a member.

7. Whatever member assumes to himself a title of the Society which he has not lawfully acquired, shall be fined two guineas, and shall be obliged to relinquish the title he has assumed ; or by non-compliance with either of these, shall be expelled.

C H A P. VI.

OF EXTRAORDINARY MEMBERS.

1. ANY member, after having written two sets of dissertations, and discharged all his debts due to the Society, shall, provided he has attended two complete sessions, or at the end of the session, when he has read his second set of dissertations, become an extraordinary member.

2. An extraordinary member shall enjoy all the privileges of an honorary member.

C H A P. VI.

OF CORRESPONDING MEMBERS.

1. ANY person who has sent some communication to the Society, or has published his opinions in any other manner, may be proposed as a corresponding member. The proposal shall be circulated with the papers, and determined at the next ordinary meeting in the same way as a petition for an ordinary seat.

2. A corresponding member shall enjoy all the privileges of a perpetual visitor. In return for which, he shall communicate to the Society any observations or cases, that shall seem to him worthy of their attention.

3. The person who shall have proposed a corresponding member, shall, after election, send him an account of his privileges and duty, accompanied with a diploma *.

* Vide Chapter respecting Certificates.

C H A P. VII.

OF HONORARY MEMBERS.

1. ANY person, after the 1st of January, may be proposed as an honorary member. The proposal shall be affixed to some conspicuous place in the library for one month, and then determined at the subsequent ordinary meeting.

2. An honorary member shall enjoy all the privileges of an ordinary member, except such as are otherwise particularly specified. He shall, besides, be excused from writing dissertations, attending meetings, and paying contributions.

3. If he receive the papers in circulation *, he shall be subjected to all those laws, from which he is not particularly exempted.

* See Chap. iv. Law ii.

CHAP. VIII.

OF PRESIDENTS.

1. ON the first ordinary meeting of the Society, after the 16th of November, (or on the 16th of November, if an ordinary meeting happen that day), the President shall appoint the election of Annual Presidents to take place at the next ordinary meeting.

2. Intimation of the appointment shall be circulated with the dissertations and minutes.

3. Each member shall be called upon, according to seniority, to deliver to the President a list of those for whom he may vote. A committee shall then be appointed to examine the lists, and to bring in a written report of the names of the members voted for, and of the number of votes for each. If two vacancies should occur in the office of President, during the session, the same order shall be followed in filling them up as at the annual election.

4. No member shall vote at the election, if he has not been admitted a month before the election shall take place, and unless his name shall have been in the list of circulation for one week at least previous to the election.

5. After the 1st of December 1792, no person shall be eligible eligible to the office of President, who has not written one complete set of dissertations.

6. No extraordinary member, whose name shall not have been on the circulation for three weeks previous to the election of Presidents, shall be put on the circulation, unless he signify his intention for that purpose to the secretary by letter. And any member who shall falsify such letter, shall suffer the penalty of expulsion.

7. The resolution of the Society, upon the 20th January 1787, (expressing their sense with regard to the conduct of extraordinary members), shall be read aloud from the chair, immediately before any election of Presidents.

8. If, at the beginning of any meeting, all the annual Presidents be absent, the office of President shall devolve on the senior member present. But, if the President whose turn it may be to preside, have occasion to leave the chair, he may substitute in his place another annual President; or, if none of the other annual Presidents be present, any member whom he may think proper.

9. The four Presidents shall officiate according to seniority. And, if the President whose turn it may be to take the chair should be absent at the hour of meeting, without having obtained another President to officiate in his stead, he shall be fined 1 s.; and, if he should not appear during the whole business, he shall be fined half-a-crown.

10. The four Presidents shall attend the meetings of the Society, and be subjected to fines, as ordinary members.

11. No President shall be allowed to resign his office, without the consent of two-thirds of the Society.

12. The

12. The President, whose turn it may be to officiate at the public business of any meeting, is to officiate at the private business of the succeeding ordinary meeting, and at all extraordinary meetings which may occur during the intervening week.

13. The President shall announce from the chair every vacancy which may occur in any office of the Society when it shall have happened; or, if it happen in the middle of the week, at the ensuing ordinary meeting. He shall take care that notice of it circulate in the minutes, and that it be filled up at the succeeding ordinary meeting.

14. The President in office shall draw up the minutes of private business, and shall deliver them to the Secretary to be transcribed into the records of the Society. The President and Secretary shall both sign the minutes; and the President shall be responsible for any omission or mistake contained in them.

15. The President in office shall regulate the debates; for any irregularity during which he may impose a fine not exceeding 1s. If any personal, impolite, or disorderly expression, should occur during the debate, the President shall immediately censure it. Should he be inattentive to this, any member may remind him of his duty, and (if necessary) may require him to take the opinion of the Society immediately. If the offending member refuse to make such concessions as the Society may judge proper, he shall incur the penalty of expulsion. But it, after he shall have made such concessions, any member should challenge him to a duel, that member shall incur the penalty of expulsion.

15. Any

16. Any member dissatisfied with the conduct of a President, may accuse him. An extraordinary meeting shall be appointed for judging the accusation. If the Society find the allegations just, the President shall be censured or deposed; if not, the accuser shall incur the penalty of half a guinea.

OF THE SECRETARY AND LIBRARIAN.

1. THE same person shall act both as Secretary and Librarian. So long as he shall discharge his duty faithfully, he shall receive L. 25 Sterling per annum.

2. The Secretary shall call over the names of the ordinary members, at the times appointed by law.

3. At private business, he shall read the minutes of the preceding night. At public business, he shall read the case and question, but not the dissertations on them.

4. He shall give to the President, every night at the private business, a list of the gentlemen who are to appoint visitors ; also of those who give in dissertations on that and the following night ; and also, the names of the gentlemen who are appointed to examine the circulation and periodical publications.

5. He shall transcribe into the records all the transactions and minutes of the Society ; and, at the end of each meeting, deliver such records to the President, to be inspected and signed by him. These minutes (transcribed into proper books), he shall afterwards deliver, together with the dissertations received, to the senior member, every Sunday during the session, at eight o'clock in the morning.

6. He shall transcribe into a book kept in the Library for the use of the members, all the new laws and permanent regulations agreed to by the Society, within eight days after they have been passed.

7. He shall give members notice when they are obliged to attend the committee of fines.

8. He shall receive the dissertations and minutes, after they shall have circulated among the members.

9. In balloting, he shall count the number of voters in the room ; and carry round the balls and box.

10. He shall, in a book kept for that purpose, and which shall be allowed to lie on the Library table, mark down the names of all those gentlemen who may have been absent from any of the roll-calls ; specifying the particular one, and the penalty incurred. He shall also mark down, in the same book, when ordered by the President, the names, offences, and penalties of any person who may have transgressed any of the laws.

11. On the second ordinary meeting in March, he shall deliver to the committee appointed for selecting subjects for dissertation, the cases and questions given in by the members. After the lots have been drawn, he shall, within the space of a fortnight at farthest, transcribe into a book, to be kept in the Library for the inspection of the members, all the sets of papers, marking each set with its proper number, and the name of the person, who is to write on the subject it contains. He shall then deliver to each person the original set allotted to him. At the commencement of each session, he shall hang

hang up in the Library a list, specifying the names of the authors for that year, and the subjects of their dissertations. If he transgress any regulation of the above law, he shall incur the penalty of 2 s. 6 d. for each offence.

12. There shall be a book kept by the Secretary, in which he shall register, at the end of every meeting, the sum of money received during that meeting. To this account he shall affix his name, and deliver the book to the President who received the money, that it may be attested by him also.

13. If an extraordinary meeting be appointed, for the accusation of any member, the Secretary shall give information of the day appointed, to the party accusing and the party accused.

14. The Secretary (as Librarian) shall have the sole charge of the Library, and shall be accountable to the Society for every book that may be lost, for which no receipt stands in the book. If he refuse to make compensation, he shall be dismissed and prosecuted.

15. The Librarian shall not erase the name of any book from the press-catalogue, unless by the desire and under the inspection of a committee appointed for the purpose.

16. Whenever a book is added to the Library, the Librarian shall, within three weeks from the receipt of it, insert its name, &c. into the press-catalogue. For any infringement of this law, the Librarian shall incur the penalty of 6 d.

17. He shall not intrust any member with the keys of the Library, or suffer any one to take down, or put up books into the book-case.

18. He shall attend at the Library every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, between the hours of four and six in the afternoon, for the purpose of giving out and receiving books from the members. After which hour he is not obliged to give out any books.

19. The Librarian shall lend books to members only; and to no member in the name of another. He shall take a receipt for every book, or books, lent out; which receipt shall be inserted into a book kept for the purpose, and signed by the member who takes out the books.

20. The Librarian shall not allow any member to have out more than twelve volumes from the Library at a time, except when a book consists of a greater number of volumes; in which case he may lend out the whole work.

21. When a book is returned, he shall expunge it from the receipt-book immediately, under the penalty of five shillings.

22. On the first ordinary meeting in December, and also that in April, the Librarian shall intimate to every member who may have the Society's books in their possession, the Society's order, that these books be returned on or before the Friday following. He shall give in to the committee of fines, a list of those who neglect to obey that order. If he transgress this law, he shall incur the penalty of 5 s.

23. The Librarian shall also be entrusted with the care of the apparatus for making experiments. He shall give it out to members on the same nights on which the Library is open, taking a proper receipt. He shall be responsible for any part of it which is lost or destroyed, and for which he can produce no receipt. When any part

part of it is returned, he shall not erase it from the receipt-book, till it has been examined and found in a proper state by one of the Library committee. He shall give members who may be using any part of the apparatus, notice to return it at the same time when the books of the Society are called in ; and he shall fine those who disobey, in the same penalty.

24. He shall collect and preserve the periodical publications.

25. For every neglect of duty, not otherwise particularly specified, he shall incur the penalty of 2 s. 6 d.

26. He shall attend Committees when ordered.

27. He shall not be permitted to speak in the Society as a member : But, if accused for neglect of duty, &c. he may (on petition) be allowed to answer in his own defence, as members, when accused.

28. The Society may dismiss the Secretary at pleasure, upon giving him intimation of their intention four weeks before ; or immediately, upon paying him a month's wages from the time of his dismissal.

29. He shall not be allowed to resign his office, without giving the Society four weeks notice ; during which time a committee shall be appointed to examine into the state of the Library, to receive the keys, and settle accounts with him.

O F V I S I T O R S.

1. AT the private business of every ordinary meeting, the President, whose turn it may be to officiate at the public business of the next ordinary meeting, two members selected by rotation, according to seniority, and the authors of the case and question for the meetings on which their dissertations are to be discussed, shall appoint each one visitor, to be admitted, if approved by the Society, at the public business of the ensuing ordinary meeting. If any member, whose turn it may be to appoint a visitor, be absent at the time for making the appointment, he shall lose his privilege, until it return to him again in rotation.

2. For the first public meeting of every session, the right of appointing visitors shall be extended to every attending member, who is present when the tickets are given out.

3. After the nomination of the visitors, their names shall be read; and if any objection should be made to any one, his admission shall be balloted for immediately.

4. The same person shall not be appointed a visitor twice within one month.

5. Any

5. Any person who may not remain in Edinburgh long enough to be appointed a visitor in the ordinary manner, may be proposed and admitted on the same night.

CHAP. XII.

OF PROVIDING SUBJECTS FOR DISSERTATIONS.

1. UPON the first ordinary meeting in March, the President shall order every ordinary member, and such other members as receive the books in circulation, to deliver to the Secretary, at the next ordinary meeting, the history of a case, and a Medical or Philosophical question, each to be written on a separate paper, and signed by the name of the person delivering them.

2. These papers shall be delivered to a committee, who shall select thirty-six sets, consisting each of a case and question. If there shall not have been a sufficient number of proper subjects, the President shall appoint a second delivery, so that thirty-six sets may be procured. Each of these being numbered, and sealed up in a separate cover, the whole shall, at the next ordinary meeting, be delivered by the committee to the Secretary, together with a report, specifying the names of the persons whose papers may be contained in each of the numbered covers.

3. The sets of papers having been thus returned, the President shall order that every person intending to write the the ensuing session, shall, at the next meeting, declare (in person or by letter), his intention. Each of the thirty-six senior members, who intend to write, shall then from numbers, on slips of papers, corresponding with those marked in the several sets, draw one.

4. After the lots shall have been drawn, the Secretary shall, within the space of a fortnight at farthest, transcribe into a book, to be kept in the library for the inspection of the members, all the sets of papers, marking each set with its proper number, and the name of the person who is to write upon the subjects of it. He shall then deliver to each person the original set allotted to him. And at the commencement of the ensuing session shall hang up in the Library the names of those members who are to write, and the subjects of their respective dissertations.

5. Any person may write on the subjects given in by himself, provided they shall have met with the approbation of the committee, and that he shall have (in writing) signified his intention at the time of delivering in his set. After the subjects shall have been thus disposed of, by lot or choice, any person who shall make any alteration, or alterations, in them, shall be fined 5 s. for each.

6. If any person be dissatisfied with one or more of the subjects, which he has procured by lot or choice, he may petition the Society for leave to alter them; this petition shall circulate along with the minutes, and be balloted for on the next ordinary meeting, when it shall be admitted, if two-thirds of the Society appear in its favour. The Secretary shall, within eight days, insert any alterations made on the subjects, in the book kept for the purpose, and in the list which is hung up in the library. Should any member petition for a subject already written upon during the session, or allotted to another member, he shall incur the penalty of 5 s. ; and if he shall write on the same, he shall incur the penalty of a guinea.

7. The same form of petitioning for leave to write on particular subjects, shall be observed by new members, who shall have occasion to write during the session they are admitted ; and likewise by those who become members, after the subjects are disposed of by lot.

8. The President, Secretary, or any member, who may have transgressed any of the laws, for providing subjects for dissertations, shall incur the penalty of 2 s. 6 d. for each offence.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

OF THE DELIVERY OF DISSERTATIONS.

1. ON the first Friday in October, the President shall order the two senior ordinary members, then resident in Edinburgh, to deliver to the President, on the last Saturday but one of October, each a dissertation on one of the subjects allotted to him : The senior one, on his case ; the junior one, on his question. On the Saturday following, the senior one, on his question ; the junior one, on his case. The President in office shall order the succeeding members, in sets of two, according to seniority, to deliver dissertations in the same order. Any member coming to Edinburgh, after his turn of writing shall have been past, must be considered as the senior member of the next set.

2. The first set of writers having, according to the above law, delivered their dissertations on the last Saturday but one of October, the Society shall discuss them on the second Saturday of November. During the immediate time, the Secretary shall, in the course of the first week, have the dissertations transcribed into books to be kept for that purpose ; and, on the following Sunday, shall deliver them, at eight o'clock in the morning, to the senior member on the list of circulation, that they may circulate amongst the members.

3. The books in which these dissertations shall have been transcribed, shall lie on the table in the library, for the inspection of the members. Any person who may remove them from the Medical Hall shall be fined half-a-guinea.

4. Every set of writers shall deliver their dissertations to the President, three weeks before they are to be discussed, in order that they may be transcribed the first week, and may circulate the remaining fortnight.

5. Should the person, appointed to write, neglect to give in his dissertation at the stated time, he shall incur the penalty of 6d. for every hour of neglect, until his fine shall amount to half-a-guinea. If he totally neglect to give in a dissertation, on the night appointed for the discussion of it, he shall, in addition to the above, incur the penalty of half-a-guinea for the first offence; of one guinea for the second; and of expulsion for the third. Sickness shall, in no case, be deemed a valid excuse, unless the person shall have been confined for two weeks, previous to the time appointed for giving in his dissertations to be transcribed.

6. No person shall be allowed to exchange his turn of writing with another, unless for a complete set, leave to exchange having been obtained by petition. No member shall be permitted to exchange with one who was not to have written that session.

CHAP. XIV.

OF THE CIRCULATION OF MINUTES AND DISSERTATIONS.

1. A Sufficient number of copies of dissertations shall be procured, at the expence of the Society, so that every member may receive them in circulation.

2. The dissertations and minutes shall circulate among the members, according to seniority, unless any two agree to change their times of receiving them for mutual convenience. No member is to keep them longer than six hours. Any person detaining one or more of the papers beyond the time appointed for sending them away, shall be fined 6 d. for each hour.

3. The Secretary shall begin the circulation every Sunday, during the session, at eight o'clock in the morning, by sending the dissertations and minutes to the senior member whose name may be on the list of circulation. This member shall send them to the next in rotation at the hour appointed,—he to his, and so on. If any person detain them more than six hours beyond the time at which he ought to have sent them away, he shall not send them to the next on the list, but to him whose right it may then be to have them. And every person is to send

send the dissertations and minutes, at the appointed time, whether they shall have been six hours in his possession or not.

4. If the dissertations and minutes be delivered at the abode of any member later than the hour appointed for him to have sent them away, he shall not incur a penalty, though they should happen to be detained ; but he must endeavour to set the circulation right as soon as possible.

5. A book shall circulate with these, in which shall be inserted the names, and places of abode, of those members who are to receive the dissertations and minutes, and the time allotted to each for the perusal of them. In another part of the same book, each member shall mark, in proper columns, 1. The name of the person from whom he may have received the dissertations and minutes. 2. The hour at which he may have received them. 3. The name of the person to whom he may send them. 4. The hour at which he may send them. 5. His own name. For any irregularity, or omission, in marking the circulation, he shall incur the penalty of 1 s.

CHAP. XV.

OF THE READING OF DISSERTATIONS.

1. THE Secretary shall, at public business, read the subjects of dissertation from the book in which they shall have been transcribed *. Then the member whose turn it may be, shall read his own dissertation ; in failure of which, he shall incur the penalty of 2 s. 6 d.

2. If any author be absent during the discussion of his paper for more than a quarter of an hour, he shall incur the penalty of 5 s. The President shall notice whatever time he may be absent.

OF THE LIBRARY.

1. SUCH periodical publications, relating to philosophy or medicine, as the Society on the recommendation of a committee to be appointed for that purpose may approve of, shall be purchased.

2. The last number of these publications shall be laid upon the Library table, and shall not be removed from the Medical Hall, until a succeeding one appear. Any person who may remove, or in any way abuse, one of these publications, shall incur the penalty of 5 s.

3. When a new periodical publication shall appear, the former shall either be bound immediately, if it be sufficiently large, or be laid aside until a number, deemed sufficient for that purpose, by the Librarian and Treasurer, be collected. Each particular book shall then be entered into the Library Catalogue, and lent out under the common regulations of the Library *.

4. At every ordinary meeting of the Society, the President shall appoint, in rotation, one of the ordinary members to report, in writing, at the following ordinary meeting meeting, what publications may at that time be upon the Library table. During the summer recess, the Library Committee shall appoint one of their members, in rotation, to present them at their monthly meetings with a similar report. Should the President, Secretary, or Member appointed, fail to observe what this law prescribes, he shall incur the penalty of 2 s. 6 d.

5. At the first ordinary meeting in December, and also at that in April, the President shall order all the books of the Society to be returned on or before the ensuing Friday. Of this order, the Secretary shall give notice to each member who may at that time have any of the Society's books in his possession. If any member neglect to obey this order, the Librarian shall, on the third ordinary meeting, report his name to the Society; should the President, Librarian, or any member, fail to observe what this law prescribes, he shall incur the penalty of 5 s. for each book.

6. A box shall be kept in the Library, in which shall be deposited the great anatomical plates, and such other books as the Society may order. The key shall be lodged with the Janitor, and access granted to the members every day, from eight in the morning till eight at night; except on Saturday evenings, when no access can be granted after four o'clock. These books shall not be lent out, nor is the Librarian to be accountable for them.

7. The manuscript dissertations read before the Society, shall be kept in a separate press of the Library, under the same regulations with the anatomical plates. Any member mutilating, or otherwise injuring them, shall incur the penalty of expulsion.

8. No

8. No member shall cause a book belonging to the Society to be taken farther than two miles from Edinburgh, under the penalty of 10 s. 6 d. for each book.

9. If any member neglect or refuse to give up a book at the request of another member, after it shall have been fourteen days in his possession, he shall incur the penalty of 1 s. for each day he may continue to detain it.

10. At the end of every session shall be printed a separate catalogue of the books added that session, containing the names of the books, with those of the places and times of their publication annexed, disposed (as in the former printed catalogues), in alphabetical order.

OF COMMITTEES.

1. ON the same night on which the Annual Presidents are elected, a Committee shall be appointed for the purpose of proposing and purchasing books, to consist of the four Presidents, and seven members chosen by ballot, out of those whose names are on the list of circulation.

2. This Committee shall, on the first ordinary meeting of every month, present to the Society, a list of books, which in their opinion ought to be purchased. This list shall remain in one of the Library drawers, till the Friday before the second subsequent ordinary meeting, and during that time any member may add to it what books he thinks proper, annexing his signature; subject, however, to the revival of the Committee, who, at a future meeting may mark out any books they think unfit to be purchased,

3. The list thus corrected, shall again be presented to the Society on the third ordinary meeting of every month, and the books contained in it shall be separately balloted for, one-third of the Society being sufficient to reject any one.

4. The

4. The books ordered by the Society shall be purchased by two members of the committee, to whom that office shall be delegated by the rest. These members shall have the power of giving orders, signed by themselves and the President in office, to any bookseller they think fit, provided they mark in a book kept for the purpose, the time when, and the person to whom their orders were addressed, with their signatures annexed. Should they give an order to any bookseller, without attending to these conditions, they shall incur a penalty of 5 s. each, and the Society shall not be responsible for such orders.

5. It shall be the duty of the Library Committee to inspect the conduct of the members, whom they appoint for the purchase of books, to fine them for neglect, in a sum not exceeding 5 s. to remove them for improper conduct in the exercise of their office, and to substitute others in their room.

6. Should it appear to any member that the Library Committee have been remiss in procuring books, which had been ordered by the Society, or otherwise guilty of misconduct, on specifying the grounds of his complaint, a Committee of five shall be appointed, of which the complaining member shall be Chairman, the second be appointed by him, the third by the second, and so on, for the purpose of obtaining an explanation from the Library Committee, which they shall report at the next ordinary meeting of the Society. If the Library Committee appear in fault, and cannot exculpate themselves to the satisfaction of two-thirds of the Society, they shall be removed from office, and a new Committee be elected in their room.

7. Should

7. Should any member of the Committee have his name taken from the list of circulation, he shall be considered to have vacated his seat, and the election of a new member shall take place accordingly. The same shall happen, when any member of the Committee leaves town, or resigns his seat.

8. The Committee shall meet on the 1st and 3d Saturdays of every month during the session, at a quarter before three o'clock. The fine for absence at the beginning of the meeting to be 6 d. during the whole of it 1 s. 6 d.

9. The Committee shall also meet during the recess on the first Saturday of every month, at the same hour, and subject to the same fines in case of absence, for the purpose of receiving from one of their number, a list of the publications on the Library table, and of ordering for the Society, and purchasing immediately any publications on Chemistry, Physiology, and the practice of Physic, which may have been published, or at least only known in Edinburgh to have been published after the last monthly report to the Society.

10. Besides their ordinary reports, the Committee shall, on the first ordinary meetings of January and April, prepare and lay before the Society, a statement of the periodical publications and transactions of Societies, that have been purchased since last report, and of the deficiencies still existing. The Committee shall also be entrusted with the care of supplying these deficiencies.

11. All the proceedings of the Committee shall be minuted by themselves in a book kept for that purpose, and the minutes signed by all the members, under the penalty of 1 s. each.

12. For

12. For every neglect of duty, not particularly specified, the members of the Committee shall be fined 1 s. each.

13. The Committee of Fines shall consist of nine members, namely, the four Annual Presidents, and the five eldest ordinary members.

14. This Committee shall meet by themselves every Saturday afternoon during the Session, at a quarter before six. They shall examine all fines that shall have been incurred a fortnight before. They shall determine, by ballot, every question that may arise with respect to the validity of appeals from fines. And each member shall be understood to have pledged his honour that he will not divulge what may pass among them.

15. If any member of this Committee be absent at the time of meeting, he shall incur the penalty of 6 d. If he neglect to attend during any part of the meeting, he shall incur the penalty of 1 s.

16. The Committee of Fines shall have an extraordinary meeting on the Monday subsequent to the last ordinary meeting of the Society, at a quarter before three o'clock, when they shall determine on all fines incurred previous to their meeting, and not formerly examined.

17. The members of the Committee of Fines shall incur a penalty of 2 s. 6 d. each, at any time when it shall appear to a majority of the Society, that they have acted inconsistently, or in violation of a positive law.

18. All Committees for examining accounts must consist of the four Annual Presidents, the Treasurer, and five ordinary members.

19. At the last ordinary meeting of the Society, in every Session, a Committee shall be appointed to examine the accounts of the Annual Presidents. This Committee shall make their report to the Society at the second extraordinary meeting after the close of the session.
the

20. At the first ordinary meeting in January, a Committee shall be appointed to examine the Treasurer's accounts.

21. At the stated periods for giving in the books of the Society, a Committee shall be appointed to inspect the Library.

22. On the Saturday previous to the election of Presidents, a Committee shall be appointed to examine the List of Circulation.

23. The five preceding Committees to be named by the President in office. But if any member object to the President appointing the Committee, before he has named any one of them, they shall be appointed by ballot.

24. The Committee appointed for the imposition of fines shall be authorised to collect them in the following manner: On the first meetings of the above Committee, in the months of November, January, and March, the Committee shall direct the Secretary to transmit to every gentleman a written account of his fines; and, before the next meeting of the Committee, each member of the Society so written to, shall pay to the Secretary the full amount of his fines, under the penalty of 2 s. 6 d.

25. The Presidents shall receive this money from the Secretary at the next meeting of the Committee, and shall account for it, in the usual manner, to the Treasurer.

26. In

26. In cases where any member of the Society desires to make an appeal, he shall intimate his intention before the next meeting of the Committee, by a written reply to the note he received from the Secretary; and, if the appeal be not sustained, the appellant shall incur the penalty of 5 s.

27. If any gentleman, thus applied to, shall not answer the note from the Secretary, within fourteen days after the receipt of it, the Committee shall report the conduct of such gentleman to the Society, under the penalty of 2 s. 6 d. from each of its members.

28. If a Committee be thought necessary for any purpose, except proposing and purchasing books, taking care of the apparatus, and adjusting the fines, the proposer of the motion, for the execution of which the Committee may be thought necessary, shall be nominated by the President to be chairman of the Committee. The chairman shall then nominate a second member, the second a third, and so on, till the Committee be completed.

29. The Committee shall give in their report in writing at the appointed time *, on the ensuing night of meeting, and be then dissolved, if the contrary be not specified.

30. The President in office may attend as a member of any Committee.

OF PENALTIES.

1. IN a book which shall be laid on the Library table, the Secretary shall mark the offences and penalties of each person who may transgress any of the laws.

2. The validity of all appeals must, in the first instance, be determined by the Committee of Fines ; but an appeal may be made from their decision to the Society at large.

3. No excuses for non-attendance, from an ordinary meeting of the Society, can be deemed valid, except two days confinement from indisposition, or two days absence from town.

CHAP. XX.

OF THE COLLECTION OF MONEY.

1. EACH member, upon signing the Laws of the Society, shall pay to the Presidents five guineas for the funds. He shall be entitled for this to a copy of the Laws, and shall be considered as having paid his first year's subscription of one guinea to the Library.

2. At the first ordinary meeting in December annually, each ordinary member, provided it is the second session of attendance, shall pay one guinea ; if the third session 10 s. 6 d.

3. There shall be a book kept by the Secretary, in which he shall register the fines, confirmed by the Committee for that purpose. Upon payment of each of these fines, the President shall annex to the account of it his signature. There shall also be another book kept by the Secretary, in which he shall register, at the end of every meeting, the sum of money received during that meeting. To this account, the President receiving the money, and the Secretary, shall annex their signatures.

4. Each member must discharge his debts to the Society on or before the first extraordinary meeting after the close of the session ; or, in default thereof, incur the penalty of a sum equal to his original fine, and be deprived prived of the privileges of a member till the whole be paid.

5. No member shall be entitled to receive a diploma or certificate, until he shall have discharged his debts to the Society.

6. The money collected by each President shall be paid to the Treasurer within eight days after it is collected, under the penalty of half-a-guinea ; and the same penalty is to be repeated every week, till the sum be paid.

L I S T

OF THE MEMBERS OF THE

MEDICAL SOCIETY

OF EDINBURGH.

FROM ITS INSTITUTION.

N. B. Those gentlemen whose names are printed in Italics, have been elected Honorary Members, without having been previously ordinary members of the Society. Many others have been raised to the same rank ; some in consequence of having written a number of dissertations ; others as the reward of particular services ; and a third set as a testimony of esteem for merit. But it has been thought improper that their names should be distinguished by any particular mark in this list, although it has been done on some former occasions.
